

Dr. Naim Jerliu, MD, MS, PhD

Naim Jerliu graduated as Doctor of Medicine (MD) from the Faculty of Medicine, University of Prishtina, Kosovo, where he also earned a Master of Science (MSc) degree in medical sciences. He holds a PhD degree from Faculty of Health, Medicine and Life Sciences, Maastricht University, The Netherlands.

He is a specialist of public health and founder of the Center on Ageing at the National Institute of Public Health (NIPH) of Kosovo.

Dr. Naim Jerliu has an extensive career in politics and was involved in the process of reforms of health sector in Kosovo. He was member of the Parliament of Kosovo and served as a political advisor to the President of Kosovo.

As a public health specialist and researcher Dr. Naim Jerliu is interested in issues related to ageing, older people, occupational health and evidence-informed policy making. He has a number of publications in scientific peer reviewed international journals.

Naim Jerliu teaches courses on public health at Faculty of Medicine, University of Prishtina and serves as Medical Director at the National Institute of Public Health (NIPH) of Kosovo.